That it is still a little warm at the Capital City may be inferred from the following clipping from Thursday's Gazette: "The weather don't seem to be inclined to let up on its July record, and everybody got a full benefit last night of its regular habits this time of the year. The Iron Springs folks who have had the nerve to come home the past few days are reaping the reward of their temerity and weeping for the mountains and the pine tree shade."

Charles Zeiger, proprietor of the Zeiger hotel at El Paso, on Wednesday stabbed Rufus McCray with a sword cane, inflicting two deep and dangerous wounds. One sword thrust passed through the fleshy part of the right shoulder, the other going through the stomach, emerging on the left side of the backbone. McCray had been in the employ of Zeiger as bartender and quit, which action incensed Zeiger, and meeting him he attacked him, with probably fatal results. Zeiger is in jail and bond has been refused. Charles Zeiger was for many years in the liquor business at Albuquerque. He made a fortune there, but lost it. He is known all over Arizona, and at one time was in business at Congress. John H. Sterling of Williams left some time last week for British Columbia. He is not expected to return. John has long been a resident of this section. He has been considered an honest and desirable citizen, but during the past year or two women and wine have caused him to lead a fast life. He recently bought his partner's interest in a band of sheep, which were heavily mortgaged, and being what he thought hopelessly in debt, he borrowed or gave checks, against which he had no bank deposit, and by this means raised several hundred dollars and skipped. The action of Mr. Sterling was a great surprise to his friends, and the majority of them are congratulating themselves that Sterling did not ask them for larger loans.
